

15.8.1964

THE approach to Melbourne's King's Bridge.

WHY OUR CITIES ARE HEADING FOR HEART TROUBLE...

The Australian
15.8.1964

Every city has a heart. And according to the prominent architect, George Clarke, at least two Australian cities are heading for heart trouble.

Next Tuesday in The Australian in the first of a series of trenchant articles on urban design and city development in Australia, Mr Clarke charges that the old way of building city centres is obsolete.

He criticises the unplanned rash of city buildings "gaudily jostling each other in marble and glass canyons."

But Mr Clarke has praise for Canberra — and Sydney's Australia Square.

City Design in Australia, beginning next Tuesday, will be just one of the many fine features in The Australian next week.

Our man in New Guinea, Keith Willey, treads uncharted paths through wild stone age country in four fascinating articles.

INVESTMENT

For the businessman, The Australian examines the tremendous growth of investment by insurance companies in the nation's industry, and looks at the reasons, the direction the new trend is taking, and the implications for Australia.

It is just one of several major financial features which will appear in next week's issues of The Australian.

In less than a month, the five-page daily Business and Finance section has become required reading for businessmen from Brisbane to Perth.

For women next week, top American designers show off MY FAIR LADY — IN LACE in a big magazine feature.

There are big pictures of the latest sunwear from the Gold Coast; a further article on Decimal Currency for Housewives; Asian Cookery and other cookery features by Ethel Brice.

Distinguished educationist Myra Roper and a panel of experts answer questions on careers from teenagers and parents in the popular EDUCATION QUESTION TIME.

'UNSURPASSED'

From Monday to Saturday, The Australian brings you the greatest collection of important feature articles of any newspaper in the nation.

To make sure of having a copy of The Australian every day, contact your newsagent and arrange for regular morning delivery.

Or, if you prefer, complete the coupon below and post it to the appropriate address in your State; The Australian representative in your city will arrange delivery through your newsagent. It's as easy as that.