CAIRNS ON MIGRATION

Australia could absorb immigrants of a different culture and color in "quite considerable" numbers, Dr. J. F. Cairns said last night.

But, he said, immigration should be on a "selective basis."

"I would watch exactly what's happening," he said.

Dr. Cairns, a Federal Labor frontbencher, was being interviewed on an ABC television program.

Asked where he stood in the debate on the homogeneous society, he replied: "Well I think every country ought to aim at a society in which conflicts are not produced."

"I think we ought to so regulate our own society, if we possibly can, that conflicts that arise from unacceptable differences are not produced.

"But, at the same time, I think this country can absorb immigrants of a different color, of a different culture, quite considerably."

Approval for new theatre

A spokesman announced last night that the Save the Theatre Royal Committee accepted the Lend Lease Corporation's proposal to build a new theatre on the Theatre Royal site.

The spokesman, Mr. Ross Thorn, was addressing a crowded meeting in the Lower Town Hall.

Mr. Thorn successfully proposed a resolution accepting "the compromise" of the new theatre.

Mr. G. J. Dusseldorp, chairman of Lend Lease Corporation, told the meeting that he would give a written undertaking to build a new live theatre on the Theatre Royal site.

The theatre would have a seating capacity of 1000 and would open "before the Opera House," he said.

The meeting was often fiery and noisy with interjections.

The chairman, Mr. Justice Hardie, called Mr. J. Munday, secretary of the Builders Laborers' Federation, to the microphone.

Mr. Munday said he would recommend to his union that the black ban on demolition of the Theatre Royal should continue "unless there is serious discussion on the subject."

When the interjection continued Mr. Justice Hardie called Mr. Dusseldorp to the microphone.

Until Mr. Dusseldorp spoke the meeting appeared to have been getting out of order and twice the public address system was turned off when a member of the audience tried to take over a microphone.

In seconding the resolution Sydney actress Darlene Johnson said the Save the Theatre Committee realised that they hadn't the power to stop Lend Lease building on the site of the Theatre Royal.

Extension

A further resolution passed at the meeting called for an extension of the Save the Theatre Royal Committee into a Save Sydney Committee.

The resolution stated that "in view of the sad but inevitable loss of the present Theatre Royal . . . and in order to prevent similar significant losses to the cultural amenity of our city in the future" a Save Sydney Committee be formed.

Mr. Justice Hardie praised the efforts of the Save the Theatre Royal Committee in "awakening the minds of Sydney people to the fact that their city is being pulled down around their ears."

He said that although the committee had not been successful in retaining the present Theatre Royal, it had at least brought home the "enormous problem" being faced by Sydney at the moment.
