MULTI-MILLION DOLLAR PLAN FOR A BIGGER LUNA PARK

An artist's drawing of the multi-million dollar plan to extend Luna Park into neighbouring Lavender Bay, creating a "Tivoli Gardens" type development.

The plan, now on display at the Stanton Library, with other phases of the North Sydney Redevelopment Control Plan, will shortly be considered by North Sydney Council.

The project, which has already been considered by Council's consultants, includes:

- Extending the present Luna Park over the existing railway shunting yards at Lavender Bay.
- Extending existing activities at Luna Park, as well as parking and other recreational facilities, including an historic railway.
- Access to Lavender Bay foreshore, which is at present closed to the public. The project provides for public access to the foreshore from Watt Park to the North Sydney Olympic Pool.

The project also provides for the provision of a marina, subject to approval by the maritime authorities.

Warning on building site thefts

Police this week warned about thefts from building sites in North Sydney.

Detectives said organised gangs were stealing equipment and tools from construction sites.

In every recent case of theft, the property stolen had not been locked away at night.

Detectives warned construction foremen to apply rigid security to help prevent the spate of thefts.

Patrolling police have found many sites unsecured and doors to security and tool sheds left open.

Major buildings are under construction on more than 50 local sites, with many reported thefts.

Equipment stolen includes expensive rammer guns, small machinery and power tools.

A detective said, "In most cases of reported theft we have found that the equipment was not locked away securely at night or weekends.

"Our normal police patrols have discovered shed doors left open and tools lying around the construction site.

"The loose security at most of these construction sites is an invitation to thieves.

"We advise all site foremen to ensure that premises are properly secured when staff are not on the site."
